4. The mother and baby unit at HMP & YOI Cornton Vale has 7 spaces. HMP & YOI Cornton Vale also has Independent Living Units and these units are used to support women as they reintegrate back into their communities. One of these units has been adapted to make it child friendly e.g. radiator guards, baby gates etc. to allow any women who has been living within the prison with their baby to progress to these units if it is deemed appropriate. The mother and baby unit at HMP & YOI Grampian opened in 2016 and has 2 spaces.

5. All pregnant women in custody are referred to community based Children and Families social workers. Women who are expected to give birth during their time in custody are subject to a multi-disciplinary pre-birth assessment, led by community based social work. If this assessment deems them suitable to have care of their baby i.e. there are no child protection concerns and crucially, they want to have their baby with them in a custodial setting, a place in a mother and baby unit will be allocated.
6. Prisoner healthcare, including mental health, is the responsibility of the National Health Service in Scotland. Women who are pregnant in custody should have access to the same services and supports as women in the community.

There is a designated Mother and Baby Nurse who works in HMP & YOI Cornton Vale who specialises in mental health and addictions. She manages and co-ordinates all aspects of the care of pregnant women in custody and their babies, linking in with local midwifery, health visiting and substance misuse teams to ensure a comprehensive care package is provided.

Post-natal care at HMP Grampian is currently provided by a health visitor.

7. We do endeavour to provide information wherever possible but on this occasion a cost exemption applies. This information is not held on our Prisoner Records System (PR2) and would require a manual search to be carried out on every individual prisoners file to ascertain whether or not this information is held. It is also worth noting that this information, should it exist, would be self-reported and therefore SPS would not be able to confirm the accuracy of any information that it did hold.

We have now completed our search for the information you request, and a copy is enclosed.
